

BIOGRAPHY

Bourbon House are a modern rock 'n' roll band whose music is just as timeless and infectious as their predecessors Led Zeppelin, Deep Purple, and Bad Company, to name a few. Founded by vocalist Lacey Crowe and guitarist Jason Clark, they have been on an upward trajectory since the release of their debut self-titled EP in 2017. Following up their first album was Wild Abandon (2018), Into the Red (2021) and The Fourth Album (2023).

Following the release of their single "Resonate" in July 2022, Bourbon House made Classic Rock Magazine's "Hot List" with a full page feature in their September issue and was named one of 15 Rising Rock Bands by acclaimed music journalist, Matt Wake. The single is the third nomination for Bourbon House by Classic Rock Magazine (Devil on my Heels and Too High to Care were also nominated) for their fiercely competitive Track of the Week competition, for which they've taken home first and third place respectively.

Both "Resonate" and their following single "Out for Blood" were featured on Apple's New in Rock playlist. "Out for Blood" also made Matt Pinfield's Weekly Rock Countdown, Live One's #WCE: ROCK station, and Live One's New Rock Now playlist.

The Fourth Album made several end-of-year top album lists just as Bourbon House began the first of five new single releases for 2024 and a full album release later in the year.
